

Customer training

Nevion offers a number of training courses through its professional services and support operation.

A variety of training courses are available, ranging from technology courses to product training as well as installation and maintenance courses on NeVion products.

The various training courses assume participants have a general familiarity with broadcasting theory such as MPEG-2, DVB, PSI and SI. The product courses include a mix of theory and hands on operation of the system hardware.

The courses are offered either as In-house training: Item No. 19723 or On-site training: Item No. 19725.

On-site training course (Item No. 19725)

This course takes place at the customer site using existing equipment, systems and signals that are operational on-site. Travel expenses for NeVion staff will be added to the cost of this course.

In-house training course (Item No. 19723)

This course takes place in one of NeVion's offices or remotely via the Web using in-house equipment, systems and signals. The remote Web option offers more flexibility in terms of changing the timing of course and eliminates travel expenses.

Please note that the duration of a product-training course is half-a-day per course with the exception of management systems training courses which require two full days of training. The minimum training time for On-site training courses is one full day plus travel time. Each course may be delivered to a maximum group of up to 6 engineers.
